CYPRUS

Cyprus is an island in South-East Europe. It is divided into two parts: a Greek part and a Turkish part and its capital city Nicosia. Cyprus is one of the smallest counties of Europe, with the 42nd largest population of 1 million people. Cyprus has hot, dry summers and warm winters. This climate makes it ideal for growing wheat, olives and a wide range of citrus fruit and vegetables. Cyprus' coastline makes it an ideal tourist destination. In ancient times, Cyprus traded with Greece and Rome.
