

THE DICKENS DAILY

Friday 16th September 1916

It's A Snow GO!

After two treacherous years in Antarctica, every member of Shackleton's crew returns safely home.

By Ms. A. Smith

In January 1914 – well over 2 years ago to this day – I partook in Scott's efforts to reach the South Pole, and I was one of the members for his dangerous upcoming Antarctica expedition. I was a biologist – sharing his excitement on first reading the plan away that he must apply.

After sifting through hundreds of applications, carefully selecting an experienced, diverse crew and preparing themselves for their adventure, Shackleton and his crew set off on the magnificent ship -the Endurance- from Plymouth docks.

3rd Paragraph

Shackleton and crew

Built a base camp for the winter months

The Endurance was stuck amongst the pack ice

The Weddell Sea

Jan –June 1915