

12.01.21 LI: I can summarise and orally retell a story.

Reorder the key story events by numbering the boxes 1-6

Ananse borrowed some money from Pig to pay the dowry for his son's marriage.

"I'll get it," said Pig. "It was my fault. I'll reach in with my trunk to get it out".

With one big shake of Pig's head, the bamboo pole fell off, alas with his trunk.

The pig had a trunk as long as the elephant's. And so proud was he of his great trunk! He could suck up water for his very own shower and he could water the plants in his herb garden.

"My money Ananse, I want my money!" "Now you have startled me," said Ananse, looking down a long bamboo pole.

But when he got to Ananse's house, Ananse pleaded for another week. "By then my debtors will have paid me back, and I'll be ready when you come by".